ment ownership of coal mines, telegraph service and the establishment of postal savings banks—these were the keynotes with which John P. Altgeld sounded a grim warning and pointed a moral Monday afternoon.

The ex-governor was the principal speaker at a meeting of workmen held under the auspices of the United Labor League at Washington Park on the Delaware. Thousands listened to him and applauded his speech.

Mr. Altgeld dwelt upon his idea of the proper scope of paternalism and the methods by which the people could be delivered from the greed of monopolists and corruptionists. In referring to the coal strike he branched out into a new theme—the government ownership of coal mines.

Mob May Rescue Him.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 7.—It is positively asserted that the friends of Horace S. Perry was United States marshal for several years and a politician of much prominence. The governor has ordered on troops to accompany the condemned man on his eight-mile march to the scene of execution and, by a strange coincidence, the colonel of Fifth regiment, which will guard him, is Judge Candler, who presided at his trial.

Pearne offered a resolution and it was passed that the conference pay its share of the debt, and $2,000 was pledged by ten persons in the congregation. The motion cutting the basis for ministerial representation was lost by 91 to 32. Gerville-Reache, member of the chamber of deputies from the island of Guadeloupe, French West Indies, advocating a Franco-Russo-American alliance against the common enemy, Great Britain, says the writer shows plainly what help America would give the dual alliance, but is not equally clear as to the benefit that America would derive.

THE MINERS' STRIKE FAR FROM SETTLED

ILLINOIS MINERS.

Issue is a National One—Win or Lose, The Ending of the Strike Should Be General Throughout the Country—Mass Meetings Held in the Pittsburgh District.

Braidwood, Ill., Sept. 7.—In an interview with Secretary Ryan of the Illinois miners, who left for Columbus today, he says:

"The proposed settlement of the miners' strike has caused considerable excitement among the miners of Illinois, and particularly in the northern coal fields. The fact that the operators of northern Illinois have refused to attend any conference looking toward a settlement of the present trouble establishes the fact that there can be no general settlement at the present time. Should the Pittsburgh miners accept the 65-cent rate and resume work history will repeat itself and the Illinois miners will be left to hold the bag. The strike was inaugurated as a national issue and should end the same way, win or lose."

Miners Elect Representatives.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 7.—Mass-meetings were held Monday all over the Pittsburgh district by the striking miners for the purpose of appointing delegates to the district convention which meets here today to consider the Columbus compromise and elect delegates to the national convention at Columbus on Wednesday. While some of the leading miners have stated that they will contend for instructions to the Columbus delegates to vote for 69 cents or nothing, it is thought 69-cent men will be in a minority and unable to successfully urge their plan.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 7.—The miners and mine owners have large hopes that the mines in the state will be at work before the end of the week. President Knight of the Mine-Workers' association is anxious for even a temporary settlement. He will swear that he saw Mrs. Luetgert in New York on May 7. His determination to help the sausage maker is due to the attack made upon him by Captain Schuetler on the witness stand. State's Attorney Deneen declares that he hopes Grottey will come, and says that he will prove his story a fabrication.

Another body will probably be boiled in the vat in the Luetgert factory.

Luetgert has written the story of his defense, and will have it published in book form. He claims he wrote love letters to Mrs. Feldt to get $4,000 he had left in her care.

WORLD'S SHORTAGE OF WHEAT.

Mark Lane Express Figures the Net Deficiency at 14,000,000 Quarters.

London, Sept. 7.—The Mark Lane Express, reviewing the crop situation, says:

"The weather has been adverse to the completion of the harvest and the quantity of grain still out is considerable. The French wheat crop is estimated at 31,000,000 quarters by the chief writers of the Paris press. Correspondents of English business firms state that the crop will amount to from 33,000,000 to 36,000,000 quarters. The Austria-Hungary crop is stated to be 17,000,000 quarters. If this is true it adds greatly to the gravity of the situation. The American crop is reckoned by careful judges to be 68,500,000 quarters, or 11,000,000 quarters improvement to offset a decline of 9,444,000 quarters in Russia and 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 quarters in France.

"All the figures point, therefore, to a deficiency in the world's supply of 14,000,000 quarters. Should the demand be actually as large as this the store of old wheat will be used and a crisis of great seriousness will only be prevented by generally good prospects for the spring of 1898. We are not, however, entitled to argue that such prospects will be more than the average."

Aldrich May Go to Cuba.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Although officials of the state department have no official information that Consul General Lee will not return to Cuba at the expiration of his leave of absence, it is pretty generally understood that Gen. Lee's resignation, which was placed at the disposal of the President last March, will be accepted soon after his arrival in the United States. In fact, it was arranged some time ago that ex-Congressman Aldrich of Chicago should be appointed consul-general at Havana, whereupon Gen. Lee came to this country. But it is not beyond the bounds of probability that the President may deem it best for the welfare of the United States to induce Gen. Lee to return to his post in October, when his leave of absence will expire.

ALL HAD A BIG TIME UP THE RIVER.

Speeches by Mayor Thoroughgood and J. Stanley Browne—Results in the Games and Races—Dance in the Evening Was Attended By 125 Couples.

All that crowds, music, enthusiasm and fun could do to make Labor Day a success, the Janesville Trades' Council had. The games were good, the races lively, and the speeches were cheered to the echo.

Mayor John Thoroughgood pointed out that the foundation of all national and industrial success is labor. First labor—then all good things follow. He believed that the ten hour day would be shortened, but questioned whether the employers of England and America could submit to the laboring man's demand for ten hours pay and eight hours work.

J. Stanley Browne of Rockford, made a vigorous speech in favor of labor organization and was loudly cheered.

40 Years the Standard.

A line is drawn through the central portion of this state, that part south of it has a corn crop fully up to last years. It is now out of danger of frosts. But in the counties north of the line at least ten days more is needed, while in the extreme northern part of the state at least three weeks more without frosts is needed to harvest corn. In Brown, Green Lake, and Fond du Lac counties there was so much rain early in the year that the farmers were late in planting. As a whole the crops in this state are good but the yield will be from 3 to 10 per cent less than last year. The average yield in the state will be from 20 to 30 bushels to the acre. The character of the corn is very good though the stalks of the corn is not quite as good as last year.

The crop of 1896 yielded 38,890,071 bushels in this state. According to these figures the crop of 1897 will therefore be something over 35,000,000 bushels, according to Mr. Rogers' report.

Correspondents report a poor crop in Iowa. The corn is spotted, and the yield will be two-thirds less than last year.

In Minnesota the crop is good, and fully up to last year. South Dakota, for the first time since 1885, will have a full crop. At that time it yielded 25,000,000 bushels, and the indications are that that figure may be exceeded.

COUNCIL WILL GIVE $2,500 Money For Enlarging the Adams School Will Be Forthcoming.

The principal work done by the common council last night was to vote $2,500 for an addition to the Adams school, and to table the dog ordinance. The bonds of John Connell and E. Richter for licenses was referred to the judiciary committee, who afterwards reported them back as in due form and sureties good and they were accepted and placed on file.

A communication from the board of education, recommending to the council the raising and appropriation of $2,500 to erect a two-story wing on the north side of the Adams school building was referred to committee on schools, who subsequently reported favorably, but left the means of raising this money to a future meeting of the council.

The report of the Janesville Water Company as to the pipes laid in 1897, was accepted and placed on file.

By Alderman Kothman—That permission be granted to the Chicago & Northwestern railway company to lay a spur track in that part of school street lying east of River street, from the present track to Rock river. Granted. Also, that the gutter on the east side of North Franklin street next adjoining the corn exchange, be paved with stone, under direction of committee on parks. Adopted.

Ald. Miltimore—That Harriett street in P. D. Smith's Park View addition be and the same is hereby adopted as a public street of Janesville. Adopted. Also, that the highway committee proceed to replank the Monterey bridge. Adopted.

By Ald. Jones—That the street commissioner be directed to serve notice upon the owner of the east end of lot 8, in block 46, Smith's addition, to build a new sidewalk in front of said property on Pleasant street. Adopted.

There was a lively debate on the dog ordinance. Alderman Stoddard was in favor of it and said he and the other bicycle riders had as good a right in Janesville as any dog. Alderman McLearn said if the town were cleared of dogs the police force would have to be doubled. He didn't wonder that dogs were excited by some of the freak bicyclers who went humping along. Two dogs pitched into one another behind the stove just then and the other remarks were drowned in yelps and snarls. The ordinance was tabled, the general opinion being that it would prove a dead letter. The council then adjourned to Sept. 15.

The Western Saddle.

Be it known that he who has ridden only on an English pigskin will find that there are things he has no knowledge of when first he throws a leg over the stock saddle of the west, and when he has seen a broncho buster ride a bucking mustang on its native heath he must admit that, although the cowboy may be neither neat nor well mannered, he could yet give points on rough riding to those who follow the foxhounds.

As the cowboy's mode of riding is distinctive, so is his horse furniture, and it is admirably adapted to his particular needs. The stock saddle, for instance, is as different from the English hunting or park saddle as a park drag is from a trotting sulky. Yet each is perfectly suited to the purposes for which it was designed. The stock saddle is of Spanish-American birth and must be heavily built, sometimes 40 pounds in weight, in order to have the requisite strength, for the high horn or pommel is necessary to the cowboy in all the uses of the lariat, or "rope," as it is now almost universally called, and thus it is required to stand the most sudden and severe strains. The rope is a very essential article of the cowboy's equipment. It is ordinarily about 40 feet long and can be thrown with accuracy perhaps 30 feet by the average puncher, although some use it effectively at a distance of 10 or 15 feet farther if its length is proportionately greater. In catching stock or in hauling anything, be it a mired wagon, a bogged steer or wood for the campfire, the rope is given a double turn around the horn, and the saddle must be strong indeed to endure such work. Moreover, it must be tightly girthed over the heavy saddle blankets, and this calls for the cumbersome cinch rigging, which in most parts of the west is double.—Allan Hendricks in Lippincott's.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the eternal confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

A Little More Cost Brings Big Profits.

The addressing, folding, inclosing, sealing and stamping of five thousand circulars, with postage, will cost at least $65, whether the circular is good or bad. Notwithstanding this fixed charge, some strive to save a dollar or two on the cost of printing, although the goods advertised are to be judged by the character of the printing, just as a house is judged by the character of its salesmen. Good printing costs but little more, and that "little more" brings greater returns than any other part of the cost. Order your printing where good work is assured.

NO GOLF MATCH TOMORROW

Milwaukee Country Club Unable to Get Together a Team This Week.

Janesville golfers who had great hopes of a visit from the Milwaukee team tomorrow received disappointing news this noon. A dispatch from J. C. Wall, secretary of the golf committee of the Milwaukee Country club explained that the nearness of the national tournament in Wheaton and the fact that so many Milwaukee golfers would be in Wheaton next week had made it impossible to get together a team.

There is much disappointment over the giving up of the Milwaukee-Janesville match as it was expected that some very fine golfing would be done by the Milwaukee players. The team which Secretary Wall expected to bring included L. W. Nieman, C. R. Falk, J. K. Isley, T. Harry Spence, R. W. Houghton, J. C. Wall and H. W. Underwood.

The party was expected to arrive at 9:30 tomorrow morning and the game was to have been called at 2:30. Luncheon was to have been served on the grounds and arrangements were about completed for serving the Milwaukee golfers a dinner in the evening.

The handicap match on the Buckle-ton links yesterday afternoon was won by Ed Whitton. Rev. W. H. Wotton was second, F. O. Grant third, J. P. Baker, H. H. McKinney and Arthur Valentine tied for fourth place and played off, McKinney winning. The gross and net scores follow:

In the ladies' game Miss Lizzie Schickler made the rounds in 49, being the best score for ladies yet made on the links. Miss Bessie Norcross made it in 51, while Miss Jennie Baker's score was 52. Miss Schickler made three rounds during the afternoon, in 49, 54 and 56, Miss Marcia Jackman scoring for her.

DIED WHILE HE WAS INSANE

Sad Details of William Croft's Case—Had Suicidal Mania.

William G. Croft, whose death in Chicago was mentioned yesterday, was the victim of suicidal mania. While confined at the detention hospital awaiting trial as to his sanity, he hanged himself on the grating of the window, using a sheet for a rope.

Chicago papers say relatives suspected his tendency but failed to speak of it when they took him to the hospital on Saturday. The body of the suicide was found shortly after midnight. He was seen alive an hour before and seemed to be sleeping. The remains were removed to the county morgue, where an inquest was held.

Mr. Croft was born in Janesville, Oct. 5, 1856. He was a machinist in the employ of the Janesville Machine Company for a number of years. During the last eighteen years he had made his home in Chicago, where by his honest and upright dealings with his customers he had built up a large oil route. Besides his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Croft, of this city, Mr. Croft leaves a wife and two little daughters, Lillian and Edna. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community in their great loss. The funeral will be held from the late home in Chicago, Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock.

MRS. RYCKMAN DEAD BY HER OWN HAND

JANESVILLE WOMAN'S SUICIDE
NEAR BOSTON.

She Went Into An Unoccupied House,
Drew Her Skirts Over Her Head, and Shot Herself—Had Not Been in This City For About Two Years.

Mrs. F. J. Ryckman of this city, is the center of a suicide sensation near Boston. She was found with a bullet through the head in the partially completed house of E. L. Wyman of Fels Road, Winchester, at 8 o'clock yesterday. A Boston dispatch says that the discovery was made by Mr. Wyman's eight year old son, who called his father. Mr. Wyman went up and saw the body which lay in the corner with the skirts drawn tightly over the head. As he approached it, the stench told him the woman had been dead some time. When the skirt was removed, one hand was found under the head, the side of the face resting upon it. The other lay upon the breast. On the face, which was partly decomposed, was seen the mark of a pistol shot which extended to the right temple. A revolver of small caliber lay beside the head. The woman was found to be about forty years of age and the physicians thought she had been dead several days. She was well dressed.

Plainly a Case of Suicide.

After inspecting the condition of affairs Medical Examiner Drake and Chief Richardson coincided in the belief that the woman had killed herself. They decided that she had gone into the house and lying in the corner had drawn her skirt over her head and shot herself. The skirt was used probably to prevent the noise of the pistol shot from being heard in the neighboring houses. An examination of the revolver showed that it contained only one empty shell and the hammer was down upon it. Nothing was on the body that would tend to identification excepting a ring which was inscribed "J. W. K. to C. E. D., Feb. 22, 1876." Chief Richardson said and no papers.

She Had Been Missing.

Some days ago Chief Richardson received a letter from the chief of police at Arlington about a missing woman. Mrs. Ryckman had been demented for some time. She left her temporary home in Boston on August 28th, at 4 p. m., taking away a revolver, which was kept in the house. This was the revolver found beside the body. The funeral was held today and there were services at the grave in the Arlington cemetery. Mrs. Ryckman had a daughter who was married a few weeks ago. Mr. Ryckman is said to be abroad. The police of Arlington made desperate effort to prevent the name of the suicide from becoming known. The chief gave strict orders not to give away the woman's name. Mrs. Ryckman's husband has been engaged in extensive business in Boston and she had been at a private sanitarium for several months.

Daughter of George H. Dann.

Mrs. Ryckman was Miss Carrie Dann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Dann of this city. She left one child, a daughter, Miss Bertha Ryckman, who has shown exceptional talent as a sculptor, and who has been in Italy for the last year, studying art. Mr. Ryckman is supposed to be with her.

CHEAP FAST TRIP ON THE NEW ROAD

MUCH TALK OF THE ELECTRIC RAILWAY TO ROCKFORD.

A Car Every Hour From Janesville to Rockford—What the Promoters of the Line Have to Offer—Fine Cars, and Equipments that Are Up to the Times

The proposed inter-urban electric railway connecting Janesville and Rockford, is fast getting out of the abstract into the concrete.

Projectors of the line promise that possibly by next spring, these cities will be connected by swiftly moving trolley cars, which will enable the residents of these cities and the intervening country to communicate with each other in a short time at a low expense.

Beloit is all excited over the proposed road. The News says:

Trolley parties to Rockford and Janesville will be all the rage next summer. Open cars gaily lighted with multi-colored incandescent lamps, among which the gold of Beloit college will predominate, will run swiftly up and down the Rock river valley loaded down with pleasure seekers. Theater parties for the best companies playing at Rockford or Janesville will be the thing. Instead of the present method of going to picnics in busses, the trolley car will be used. For all parties which charter a car, reduced rates will be given. For theater parties, a special car will be run late to bring them back.

E. J. Best and E. A. Lee declare emphatically that they are not spending their time and money here in getting a right of way for nothing. They mean business and that positively as soon as the franchises are secured the construction of the road will be begun. Of course there is a class of people who won't believe it until they see the road in operation, and if this was a new company they could not be blamed. But this is an old company backed by eastern capitalists and has constructed several roads already this year.

MAY LOCK HIM OUT OF JAIL

Burglar P. St. John Is Having Hard Work To Prove His Guilt.

Peter St. John, who is trying hard to be sent to Waupun for burglary, meets with many disappointments. He was taken to Evansville yesterday, and a warrant was issued there, as required by the statutes. He waived examination, and was held for trial in the municipal court.

When St. John gave himself up at the jail Sunday night, he described the robbery of the Almeron Eager house in Evansville, with great detail. He put in one or two points, however, that led to the suspicion that he was innocent and was talking to hear his own voice. He told about entering the house through a cellar window, while in reality none of the cellar windows were touched. Mr. Eager declared that St. John was not the man who broke into his house.

St. John said he had a partner in the job, and in Evansville yesterday, he gave a description of his partner, and the name. The police are looking for the man, and hope to get him within a day or two.

AN EYE FOR AN EYE.

BY CHARLES L. HILDRETH.

[Copyright, 1897, by the Author.]

CHAPTER I.

Why he should have chosen such a spot for his dwelling no one could imagine. The "Valley of Death," the old Spanish settlers had called it, and it deserved its title, for a more utterly hopeless, desolate, barren region was not to be found in all Arizona. Within 15 minutes' ride from the fort there were half a dozen excellent "sections" supplied with abundance of rich bottom grass, wood and water, any one of which he might have had for the taking, to say nothing of contiguity to the post—no small matter in a country where any day in the year one might be called upon to defend one's life and property against the very worst savages on the globe.

But Omer ignored all such considerations. A deputation, of which I was one, went out from the fort one day to warn him against the folly of his course. He received us with grave courtesy, listened to what we had to urge, but politely declined our advice. The spot he had chosen suited his purpose, he said, and he saw no reason to change.

We argued with him, representing his exposed situation, the absolute certainty, sooner or later, of a visit from the marauding Apaches, which of course meant robbery, arson and murder and the impossibility of timely aid from the fort, but argument, warning and remonstrance were vain. He was inflexible, and we retired in a dudgeon, for he very frankly intimated that he was not at all grateful for our interference and preferred to be left strictly to himself. He had selected a dwelling place which he believed neither whites nor Indians would dispute with him, and all that he asked was to be let alone. So he told us in plain terms.

He had built himself a hut of split cypress logs chinked with clay and thatched with the broad, tough leaves of the sand palm, whose thick, oily fronds shed water like glass. The hut—jacale, the Mexicans call it—was divided into two apartments, the larger occupied by his mustang and the smaller by himself and his setter dog. Other companions he had none.

I caught a glimpse of some books in a rack against the wall. There were an inkstand, pens and paper upon his pine table, under which were carelessly huddled a winchester repeater, an ammunition belt, a hunting knife and a huge revolver. He wore a cheap flannel shirt, rough trousers thrust into common, awkward boots heavily spurred and a cheap slouch felt hat, but I detected a suit of fine black cloth hanging in a corner of the room, and there were other evidences of past refinement about the place, more or less hidden, but still evident to an observant eye.

"Confound the fellow!" growled Lieutenant Reed as we rode homeward discomfited and irritated. "He will lose his scalp one of these days. Serve him right, too, the obstinate beggar! But there is something about the man I like in spite of his airs. I'd give a month's pay to know his past history."

"Perhaps it's the old sordid story," I suggested. "A scrape of some kind. Short in his accounts, a sudden exit, and all the rest of it."

"No," replied Reed positively, "I am sure it's not that. He is no common rascal. I'd stake my commission on that."

I agreed with him, and our rebuff only stimulated my curiosity the more and made me the more determined to penetrate the mystery surrounding the strange man living alone out there in the "Valley of Death." A week later I rode to Omer's jacale by myself. He

"Well, sir, what do you want?" was at home, engaged in skinning a freshly killed antelope before the door of his hut, while the hungry dog sat by, expectant of his share.

He gave me a cold and frowning reception, but I was prepared for that and seated myself uninvited upon a horsehide stool to wait until he should have finished his work. I uttered some commonplace as to the weather in the effort to open a conversation, but he vouchsafed no reply, going on methodically with his occupation in scowling silence.

When he had completed his task, he arose, wiped his knife and thrust it into its sheath, then, turning sharp upon me, said in a stern, abrupt tone:

"Well, sir, what do you want?" I was so disconcerted that for the moment I had no answer ready.

"Why do you come here," he went on, "when I have given it to be understood with sufficient plainness that I desire no visitors?"

"You are hardly courteous, sir," I managed to reply stiffly.

"I have no intention of being so," he said in the same uncompromising tone. "I wish to see nobody. I wish to be left entirely to myself. I established myself in this barren spot hoping that I should escape intrusion upon my privacy, but it seems that I am to be persecuted by every impertinent idler who takes it into his head to force himself upon me."

"You have said quite enough, sir," I retorted contemptuously. "You are upon your own ground here, and I am an intruder, as you intimate, though I trust not an impertinent one. I beg your pardon and bid you good day."

He colored and looked uncomfortable, but said nothing, as I turned and walked quietly to where my horse was fastened. As I was preparing to mount, however, he called to me in an altered tone:

"Wait a moment, sir. I ask your pardon most sincerely. I am conscious that I have treated you very shabbily. There are reasons"—he broke off and added—"but accept my apologies and do me the favor to enter my house, such as it is."

His conciliatory manner backed by my consuming curiosity placated me very readily. I turned back and accepted his offered hand. "Come in," he said. "Your ride must have given you an appetite, and if you can put up with an antelope steak broiled upon the coals join me at dinner. I can offer you no better fare."

I think my frank acceptance of his invitation did more to establish friendly relations between us than any amount of talk would have done. I ate his antelope steak with hearty appreciation. After an hour's conversation, during which I learned no more of his past history than I knew at the beginning, I bade him farewell and rode away.

He invited me to come again, but begged me to keep my visits a secret from my fellow officers at the fort. Otherwise, he added, with a melancholy smile, he would be forced to pull up stakes and seek seclusion still deeper in the heart of the desert.

CHAPTER II.

I kept his counsel and thereafter made a practice of riding out to his jacale once or twice a week.

He always welcomed me as if glad to see me, and I think he really came to like me. But I made no advance in his confidence. The smallest allusion to the past turned him cold and stern in an instant. I gathered from his talk that he had once been well to do, had occupied some station in the world and was not ignorant of the customs of good society. But beyond that I could not lead him by my most cautious and skillful diplomacy.

Once indeed I caught a glimpse of his secret, though so vague that it revealed nothing, through an outbreak of passion which really deepened the mystery.

I had been pressing him to give up his unsocial habits and to visit the post. We had a small contingent of ladies there, I told him, wives and relatives of the officers, who would be pleased to add him to the number of their friends.

He smiled, but shook his head in his obstinate way.

"Come, now," I said persuasively. "You will find yourself a favorite, I assure you. Besides, we have just instituted a tennis club, and you would be exactly the man!"

I stopped short, literally appalled by the change in his features. His face became livid, he started to his feet and stared at me with an expression of mingled rage and misery.

"Tennis!" he rather shrieked than said. "You invite me to take part in that infernal pastime, which has made me what I am, an outcast, a homeless wanderer on the face of the earth, which has deprived me of everything I held dear on earth!"

"But tennis!" I replied in utter amazement. "Surely so innocent and harmless an amusement!"

"Innocent! Harmless!" he repeated. "Man, it has made me a criminal worse than a murderer. It has devoted me while I live to endless, hopeless remorse."

I could do nothing but gaze at him in helpless wonder. He saw the effect of his raving upon me, for he controlled himself with a great effort and sank back into his seat, wiping the drops of sweat from his forehead.

"Pardon me," he said faintly. "I must seem a madman to you, but I have associations of the most painful kind with that amusement." I saw that he could not bring himself to utter the name. "Please forget what I have said and do not mention that—that subject again."

I promised and left him, considerably upset by my experience.

On my return to the fort I found the garrison in a state of unvoiced excitement. A runner had brought in the news that Chief Colorado and his Apaches had again broken out from their mountain fastnesses and were burning, destroying and murdering in their customary fashion. Within the hour another courier had arrived from the eastward with the information that our colonel, with his wife and daughter, was on his way to the post.

A messenger on the back of a fleet mustang had been dispatched to warn him of the danger, so that he might not undertake the journey from the station at Guadalupe over a region sure to be infested by the Indians before he could reach the fort. But those of us who knew Colonel Montgomery had little expectation that our warning would affect him, except indeed to confirm him in his determination to make the trip, for in plain truth there was not a more obstinate, pigheaded old fellow in the service. He had but to receive a word of advice, however respectfully worded, from an inferior to decide upon a move against it. Moreover, he knew nothing of Indian warfare. He knew no command beyond the Mississippi, but for that very reason he would be the more certain to resent suggestions that those whose experience might have taught him something.

"He will be sure to try it," grumbled Reed, "and before tomorrow night that devil Colorado will be in the Skane pass. A little scalping might do the old fool good, but I am thinking of the women."

The result of our council was that I started at daybreak on the following morning with a troop to effect if possible the rescue of the colonel and his party.

"I question if you will get there in time," said Reed. "It will be touch and go anyway. But you can try it. If he loses his hair and the women are carried off, he'll have nobody to blame but himself."

We had ridden hard for four hours without meeting with any disturbing sign, when Sergeant Jennings, who was acting as advance guard and guide, brought us to a sudden halt. He had dismounted and was bending over some object in the short turf. I got out of the saddle and joined him.

"What is it?" I asked. "A white man has been over this route not two hours ahead of us," he replied. "Who is he?"

"Why not an Indian?" I inquired, studying the deeply indented track. "I makes the young feel old, and the old feel that life is not worth the living. It's a danger signal of Kidney Disease—the unerring evidence of weak, inactive and sore Kidneys. Any person cured of Kidney weakness will tell you that when the back ceased to ache, all troubles ended. Neither liniments, nor plasters, nor electricity can cure it. The seat of the trouble is not in the skin, flesh or muscles. It's in the Kidneys.

CURED

I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for some time and have not been free from backache in years. I took a few doses of Dr. Hobbs' Spargus Kidney Pills and found almost in immediate relief. I can recommend them very highly to all who are afflicted with such trouble as I had. SANFORD MCCALL, Switchman W. C. R. R., Ashland, Wis.

the rugged trail leading to the pass. While we were stumbling up the stony track, guiding our panting horses, here beneath a lofty overhanging wall and there around the brink of an unfathomable abyss, an uproar of shouts, cries and rifle shots burst out, apparently a few hundred yards beyond.

Forgetting all prudence, I dug spurs into my horse and rode recklessly up the path, followed by my troopers as reckless as myself.

In two minutes we came to an open plateau broadly illuminated by the newly risen moon where, amid the flash of firearms, the glint of waving steel and yells which would have made music for a carnival of fiends, a score of dark figures were struggling and whirling to and fro around a small group, one or two of whom wore the light, fluttering garb of women.

I saw one of the shapes on horseback bend down and drag one of the females to his pommel. Then another figure on foot darted toward him. There was a double stream of red fire, and the shape on horseback threw up a pair of naked brown arms and pitched headforemost to the earth. The figure on foot assisted the female to the ground, then clasping both hands before his face sank in a heap at her feet.

The whole of this picture impressed itself upon my brain in a succession of lightning flashes. Then I was in the midst of the melee. I have no clear memory of what came after. I recall only a confused plunging of infuriated horses, a wheeling and slashing of sabers, the reports of carbines and revolvers, a trooper rearing his charge to make a down blow here, another bending far out of the saddle to deliver a thrust there, myself in the heart of it all, working away, doubtless with zeal commendable in a young officer.

The skirmish was a matter of less than ten minutes. When we had sent those of the Apaches who were not left dead or wounded upon the field scrambling up the heights for their miserable lives, we pulled ourselves together and began to take note of our own condition.

One of my troopers was badly hurt in the side with a lance thrust, another's leg had been broken by a ball, and two or three were grumbling over flesh wounds more painful than dangerous. Altogether we had come off very well.

The colonel had behaved like the obstinate, narrow minded, but heroic old soldier that he was, and now stood leaning upon his saber, waiting to receive my respects, which I paid him in due form.

"You have done well, sir," he condescended to remark, "very well indeed. Not that I needed your help. No, sir, we should have thrashed them all the same"—which was not true—"but I thank you, lieutenant."

A woman's voice crying out in an anguished tone: "Father! Father! He is dead! Come here!" interrupted our conference.

We hurried to where a number of troopers, some bearing torches ignited at the smoldering campfire, had gathered about a prone figure, whose head was supported upon a girl's knee. The man's face was so covered with blood from a wound that I did not recognize him at first. He wore civilian's dress, and his rigid hand still clutched a revolver.

"Hello!" cried the colonel, his generous feelings in the ascendant for once. "That is the brave fellow who gave us warning of the attack! He fought like a paladin. I never saw such utter reckless gallantry, and I have seen some pretty rough fighting in my time too. A civilian at that! I sincerely hope he is not badly hurt."

"Dead! Dead!" sobbed the girl heart-brokenly. "He saved me at the sacrifice of his own life."

"No, miss," said Sergeant Jennings, who had been examining the insensible figure; "badly wounded, but still alive."

"Oh, thank and bless you for those words!" cried the girl, raising her white face and pushing back her loosened hair. Then, by the flare of the torches, I saw that she was one of the loveliest beings I had ever beheld; that she would have been well nigh perfect in face, as she was in figure, but for one sad defect—she was blind of one eye.

"The ball struck him just here on the temple," said Jennings. "It's an ugly wound, but there is a good chance for him to pull through."

Murmuring again, "Bless and thank you," the girl bent over him and wiped the blood from his face with her handkerchief.

"It is odd," said the colonel. "I seem to know that young man, but I cannot place him. There was something familiar in his voice, too, as he came rushing in before the skirmish."

"Look, father," replied his daughter, turning the unconscious face more to the light of the torches.

"Henry Omer!" ejaculated the colonel. And at the same instant I recognized my mysterious friend.

"What does it mean?" continued the colonel, with an expression of mingled trouble and perplexity in his grizzled features. "He was thought to be dead."

"And dead he will be," interposed Sergeant Jennings bluntly, "if we don't get him to the fort as soon as possible."

The necessary orders were issued, and half an hour later, with our wounded bestowed upon improvised stretchers, we took up our march for the post.

Agnes Montgomery rode close beside the litter upon which Omer, still insensible, was borne. At every halt she dismounted and hung over him until the journey was resumed.

One day I was sent for to the colonel's dwelling. Propped upon pillows, looking woefully haggard and weak, with a bandage covering one eye, I found Omer. Standing at his bedside, clasping one of his thin hands in both of hers, was Agnes Montgomery, looking wan and worn, too, but I thought there was something of quiet happiness mingled with the divine pity of her expression. I noted that she wore glasses, so that the defective eye was scarcely observable.

Omer smiled faintly as I approached him and held out his other hand. I uttered some words of sympathy for his misfortune and congratulated him upon his escape from a worse fate.

"You may well congratulate me," he said, "for I am the happiest man on

"But you do not know," added Agnes, earth, I fully believe. The doctor tells me I shall lose the sight of one eye."

"But that, it seems to me"—I began dubiously.

"The very reason," he interrupted. "Yes, the loss of this eye is a reparation."

"Oh, Henry!" the girl exclaimed in a pained voice.

"It is so, Agnes," he said, with a tender smile. "I feel that Providence has dealt not only justly, but kindly, with me. I have paid an eye for an eye, and I am only too happy that the price has been accepted."

Turning to me, he continued: "I am still very weak and must confine my explanation to a very few words, leaving you to guess the rest. It was at a game of tennis"—his features contracted as he uttered the word—"that by an unlucky blow, clumsy brute that I was—I injured the eye of the woman I loved more than life. When I learned that the sight of it was gone forever, I became mad for a time, I think. I fled far and fast. I traveled I know not where, until at length I found a place in the desert where I meant to drag out the remainder of my miserable existence. You wondered why I would not take your well meant warning about the Apaches. Well, in my secret heart I welcomed the idea that a savage's lance might put a period to my wretchedness. When I learned from one of your fort messengers who stopped to water his horse at my place of the Apache outbreak and the coming of Colonel Montgomery and his family, I was filled with terror and delight—terror for their peril and delight at the hope that I might perhaps sacrifice myself in the effort for their rescue. I did not join your troop, because I knew your movements must necessarily be slower than mine. I counted upon warning the colonel's party and holding the Indians in check until you could come up. You know what happened."

"But you do not know," added Agnes, blushing, yet proudly, "that I loved him always; that I felt more sorrow for him than I did for myself, and that the bitterest hour of my life was when the report reached me that he was dead, as the happiest was"—she hid her face upon his pillow—"when I knew that he had not perished in my defense, but would live to be my own by a double tie."

"An eye for an eye," murmured the patient, with a fond smile.

Then I discreetly withdrew.

THE END.

The insurance is $40,000. Four hundred and fifty men were thrown out of work by the fire.

Good Printing...

Is like good painting—it demands and obtains a second glance. The second glance leads to thought about and knowledge of the thing portrayed, and then on to the artist or advertiser.

The kind of printing as well as the kind of painting that it pays to do and to have done is that which obtains this "second glance." Plenty of the other kind!

We are PRINTERS. Our work obtains glances of admiration, and thus leads on to the end desired. We don't do the "other kind." Put our job room to the test.

Her Feeling.
"Oh, I came near getting myself into trouble," said the young man at the summer resort.

"What was the matter?" asked the other young man.

"I thoughtlessly kissed the widow's daughter right in her mother's presence."

"And her mother was angry?"

"Well, not exactly. She was jealous."

New Deal In Fruit-- During the balance of the season we will retail all Fruit at wholesale prices. This decision on our part will mean a great saving to purchasers and is an announcement that is perfectly reliable. We intend making a leader of our Fruit to draw trade. We don't expect to make any money on it, and, as we said before, simply handle it as a trade bringer. Quality, of course, is the one thing to be most considered. Our Fruits have always been the best and all Fruit carried by us in the future will be up to standard all around. Prices quoted will be only on the best quality. All our Fruit is bought through a broker on South Water Street, Chicago, who has done our buying for the past thirteen years. We receive large shipments every day. He is a good Fruit buyer as our goods have always proven. Our prices will be considerably lower on the same class of goods than you can buy elsewhere.

And so on down through the entire list of Fruits the prices will be proportionately lowered. Remember the qualities are the best when comparisons with other goods and prices are made. We don't make money on the fruit; it's simply a leader.

The "Klondyke"

That's the name of the newest and swellest style shown for this Fall. It is now placed in our window. This Shoe is made in two colors, Russia Calf and Box Calf, both leathers which have proven very popular. It is especially built for out-door wear.

On the new toe, with the late 'rape-stitch' edge, brass hooks and eyelets. This is dressy, and a faultless foot-fitter. We are always up-to-date. Watch our window for the new ideas.
